

FOCUS Session

Adapting to Form the Ideal Partnership with Your Executive

Liking someone has nothing to do with working effectively with someone.
An ideal partnership is about understanding each other and learning how to communicate synergistically and productively.

Working closely with a challenging manager can be a difficult and draining task, particularly if your styles and preferences are very different. This seminar introduces concepts in overcoming emotional traps and strengthening your ability to adapt to individuals who may not always be on the same page as you. Topics include:

- Recognising differences in preferences, communication and personality styles
- Practising empathy and tolerance
- Synergistic communication
- Keeping your sanity with difficult bosses.

An ideal partnership comes from mutual trust and good faith, a common approach and a 'bucket-load' of tolerance and understanding. Adapting your reactions can turn a mediocre relationship into an ideal partnership. Come along and learn some practical 'sanity-saving' tips and techniques.
